

Ethical Principles in the Cry of the Earth

Actions which we take today can undermine the well-being of millions of people now, especially the poor and condemn future generations to live in an inhospitable world.

Christians across the world have a vital role in the forming the conscience of their governments in this issue.

As Christians, we cannot consider ourselves in isolation from others or from endangering the earth or its creatures. Your present needs must not be met in a way that puts future generations

at risk
